Making Tea, Making Japan Cultural Nationalism in Practice

As much as the tea ceremony is one of the archetypal symbols of Japanese culture for foreigners, tea is also central to notions of Japaneseness within Japan, contends Kristin Surak in Making Tea, Making Japan. Referencing major studies of nationalism as an ideology and as a practice of daily life, Surak identifies the tea ceremony as a symbol of the modern state, and she analyzes tea as a type of "nation work," a means of translating abstract ideas of Japanese identity into bodily ...

Tea culture in Japan - Kuoni Travel

A Japanese-style teapot is, unsurprisingly, ideal for making Japanese green tea. If you don't have one, use a mesh strainer to strain the loose leaves out of the tea. A good rule of thumb is around 2 heaping teaspoons of tea per cup of water. Brew the leaves for about 30 seconds; that's all you'll need for most types of green tea leaves.
