recipes and childrens' textbooks. You can download any page as a PDF using a link provided in the left-hand menu, but unfortunately there's no support for other formats. There's also Collection Creator - a handy tool that lets you collate several pages, organize them, and export them together (again, in PDF format). It's a nice feature that enables you to customize your reading material, but it's a bit of a hassle, and is really designed for readers who want printouts. The easiest way to read Wikibooks is simply to open them in your web browser.

The Woodland ceramic tradition originated in the Eastern Woodlands and Midwest circa 2500 years ago. From there the technology of ceramic production spread to other cultures on the Great Plains where it occurs as early as AD 300. Unlike most of the other ceramic traditions found in Wyoming, Woodland pottery was produced by at least three distinct cultural complexes; Avonlea, Besant and South ...

The making of ceramic vessels in the area now known as Southeastern United States was started during the Late Archaic Period around 2,500 BC along the coast of modern-day South Carolina and Georgia with vegetative tempered pottery and shortly thereafter along the northern coast of the territory known today as North Carolina with sand tempered ceramics. Further inland, west of the fall line, this new pottery invention
